There is no place in Michigan around which centers greater local political interests than the rural village of Franklin, in the southeastern portion of Oakland county. ## BIG DAY IN FRANCE

One Hundredth Anniversary of the First Republic

CELEBRATED IN REGAL STYLE

Paris Streets Thronged With Patriotic People—Public Buildings and Statues Decorated and Illuminated.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The city has not witnessed for many years a more enthusiastic spectacle than the celebration today in honor of the hundredth anniversary of the proclamation of the first French republic. The streets have been thronged with people from an early hour, all showing in their appearance their evident joy at the decorations they wore, and the spirit of pride and patriotism seemed universal. Royalsists were absent, but not conspicuously, as they have dwindled down to such a small coterie that their absence was almost unnoticed. Both the national and the municipal governments joined in making the celebration.

Means of Leveling Differences.

The extreme socialists went hand-in-hand with the moderate republicans in doing honor to the day, which, while it saw the proclamation of the republic, also saw the early beginnings of the reign of terror. Indeed, the municipality of Paris, largely controlled by the extremists, went into the celebration with an earnestness that fully justified the liberality of the national government in granting to the city of Paris 500,000 francs of the 200,000 francs appropriated for the celebration. The flag of the republic was everywhere displayed, and the statues and monuments of the great men of the revolution were decorated and adorned. Every public building in the city was also decorated.

Gladstone Will Speak Out.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Gladstone intends to indicate at the lord mayor's banquet on November 9 the character of the measures which he proposes to introduce at the coming session of the parliament, and that Mr. Balfour, the party leader, has made arrangements to speak at Edinburgh university directly afterward in criticism of Mr. Gladstone's proposals.

IMPORTANT AMENDMENTS

Made by the Odd Fellows at the Closing of the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 22.—The sovereign grand lodge of the Odd Fellows indefinitely postponed consideration of a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the lodge that persons otherwise qualified who are engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors are not of such "good moral character" as to be eligible to membership in a subordinate lodge.

The competitive drill was won by the Sacramento canton. There were three competitors, Santa Rosa, Sacramento and Baker City. The next sovereign grand lodge will be held in Milwaukee. That city was selected for the morning's session of the lodge by nearly two-thirds vote. The result was as follows: Milwaukee 101; Chattanooga, 50; Chicago, 26. The work of the gathering is largely drawing to a close.

TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE.

Places of Strikers Will be Filled But They Are Confident of Success.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Sept. 22.—There are no new developments in the strike of the telegraph operators on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern road. The company claim it will have the places of striking men filled in a few days and that freight and passenger traffic is being loaded. Chief Ramsey says the men are as confident of victory as when they went out; that no trains except those running on schedule time are being moved and the company would not be able to fill the places of strikers with competent men. He said, too, that when the road was thoroughly scabbed other organizations will refuse to receive orders from them and there would be a general strike.

JUDGE GRESHAM TAKES TIME

For His Decision in the Illinois Steel Company's Case.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Judge Gresham today took under advisement the interstate commerce cases which have been on hearing before him for three days. The attorney for the steel company, however, submitted additional authorities and a decision will probably not be rendered for some weeks. A very weighty authority submitted by the attorney for the steel company was a decision by Justice Field of the United States supreme court in denying the jurisdiction of the commission appointed by congress to investigate the accounts of the Pacific railroads, which were indebted to the government. The railroad officials refused to produce their books and accounts showing the indebtedness and Justice Field sustained them in their refusal.

In commenting upon this case, the court said if the attorneys for the respondents pursued this theory they must contend that all the legislation in congress on the powers of the government investigating commissions is unauthorized and unconstitutional. A question in the court's mind was whether such was the fact, and he wanted more light on the subject in the way of authorities.

Important Test Case.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 22.—The grand jury today found true bills against Lieut. Col. J. B. R. Sireator, Col. A. L. Hawkins and Assistant Surgeon William Simpson Grim of the Tenth regiment national guards of Pennsylvania, charged with aggravated assault and battery in connection with the case of William L. Iams a private in Company K. There is also a bill against Colonel Hawkins on a charge of assault and battery. The right of national guard officers to inflict such punishment will now be tested.

The bonds will bear 6 per cent. interest and will be dated November 1, 1904, payable on or before January 1, 1904.

Sues Three Saloon Men.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—In a suit begun in the superior court today Mrs. Elizabeth Sheldon of 820 West Madison street, seeks to recover $10,000 from three saloon keepers, who, she alleges, have made a drunkard of her husband. They are Lester Williams, of 725 West Madison street; R. V. Hunt of 618 West Madison street, and Morgan & Grams, of 708 West Madison street. The owners of the premises are implicated.

No Postponement on Any Account.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The world's fair management is considerably annoyed by the circulation of reports that the exposition is to be postponed for a year. There is not the slightest foundation for these reports, the idea of postponement never having been thought of by the officials of the exposition.

Receives a Visitor.

Destroyed by Lightning.

BRANDY, Pa., Sept. 22.—A special to the Erie, Pa., Post-Journal, says: "The opera house was struck by lightning at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The flames spread and burned the entire business portion of the town. Thirty-two buildings in all were burned."

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.—The people's party state central committee announces that a careful poll of the state just completed shows that they will have a plurality of 17,000 votes for the Weaver electors out of a total of 71,000 voters canvassed.

EMINENT SUICIDES.

Clive and Castlereagh Killed Themselves and Napoleon Attempted To.

The history of suicides presents a long array of eminent victims. The suicides of antiquity are not considered, for men were educated in those days to embrace suicide when all was lost. We do not find many conspicuous instances of suicide in the Middle Ages. Outdoor activity and an intensely practical life were the rule with men of sensibility outside of convent walls, and suicide was not common until the eighteenth century, when men of sedentary lives began to multiply. The nineteenth century is conspicuous for suicides compared with the eighteenth, and the most studious nations in the world, Germany, furnishes the largest list of suicides.

Next to Germany, France furnishes the largest list of suicides among civilized peoples. The English are not prone to suicide. Their love of outdoor sports keeps them free from dyspepsia and disorders of the liver, and their native courage and endurance prompts them to going to live even when life is but one long, conscious road of pain. Three eminent Englishmen committed suicide, Lord Clive, the founder of England's Indian empire, Sir Samuel Romilly, a great jurist and philanthropist, and Lord Castlereagh, a famous statesman. England's representative in the congress of Vienna after the fall of Napoleon, was Clive was a hypochondriac from youth, and used opium in his last years; Romilly was despondent over the death of his wife, and bitterly repented his act with his dying breath. The self destruction of Castlereagh was never clearly explained. Napoleon attempted suicide. Frederick the Great prepared for it by carrying poison in his clothes during his dreadful fight for his crown.

No eminent American has ever committed suicide, although suicide is more common in America than in England, owing doubtless to the intensity of our struggle for wealth and fame. Insane men are frequently suicides, but it can hardly be said that all suicides are insane. The paralysis of self preservation may result from severe mental and bodily suffering, and the deliberation and seeming sanity of the suicide's preparation for death, the calmness of his last words, would often seem to forbid the theory of insanity. The hopeless consumptive, the victim of cancer, not seldom commits suicide to secure that sudden stop to suffering that we call humanity when extended to a wretched brute. Suicide is rare among savage tribes, probably because they are so occupied with purely material matters that they have no time for spiritual agony or severe mental strain, or a costly round of various vices.—Kansas City Journal.

Chased by a Wild Car.

"I was chased once by a box car," said Harry G. Moore, an ex-railroad man. "It was out in Colorado, the land of steep grades and sharp curves. We were sliding down the mountains one day with a baggage car and two coaches. I was on the rear platform looking at the road when I decided a box car coming down the grade at a rate of speed that was appalling. It struck us and we were gone sure, for it would smash the entire train into kindling wood and pile it up in one of the gorges. Our only hope was either to outrun or wreck it. The engineer caught sight of it at the same instant that I did and put the lever down among the tallow pots. It appeared impossible that we could hold the track on the sharp curves while moving more than a mile a minute, but we did, and the box car continued to sail on."

"If we could once get to the foot of the grade we would be safe, but that was soon seen to be impossible. Rapidly as we were going the box car continued to gain upon us, and now we could see that it was loaded with iron. Something must be done and that quickly. All the passengers had fled into the forward coach and were hanging on to the seats. I signaled the engineer to shut off, set a brake hard on the rear coach, pulled the pin and the engineer opened the throttle. We had not gone 100 yards before the box car ran into the coach and sent splinters flying a quarter of a mile high. Both went plunging over into a chasm."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Common Malady.

"I came into a little money a few months ago," said the sad man, "and as I had been working for others all my life I thought I would go into business for myself. I took a look at about fifty stores that were advertised for sale, and by the time I got through investigating I knew it all and flattered myself that the man wasn't living who could get the better of me. Nearly all the places offered for sale had a run down look about them that told only too plainly why their owners were anxious to get out of business. On the other hand, some of the stores had that unmistakable evidence of newness about them that I was quick to see that they were merely got up to sell by sharpers and had no established trade at all."

"At last I brought out a cigar store. It was sold on account of sickness, and no one could doubt the owner's word who saw him. He was the sickest looking man I ever saw, and I didn't question him very closely because I felt that a man who was as near dead as he was wouldn't be apt to lie. But I couldn't have bought a worse business if I had tried. During the three months I was there I don't think there was a single day when I didn't smoke more cigars myself than I sold. At last the man next door asked me how I was making out, and when I told him he wanted to know what excuse the other man had given for selling."

"It was on account of sickness," I said. "Did he tell you how he got sick?" "No," he replied. "Well," he rejoined in a low and sympathetic voice, "the poor fellow got sick trying to make the place pay."—New York Evening Sun.

Who Have Are Dangerous Passengers.

A most remarkable instance of the mischief which the rat is capable of doing came to light during the proceedings of a naval court of inquiry held in August 1875, for the purpose of investigating the cause of the loss of the bark Commodore of Harpersburg. The vessel, which was burned at sea, had been loaded with a cargo of timber, and the fire broke out in the hold in a most mysterious manner. It was eventually proved, on the evidence of the entire crew, that beyond a shadow of doubt the outbreak was originated by a rat carrying off a lighted candle, which had shod in the forecastle and was promptly snuffed by the sailors, and dropping it among the dry and redwood pine stowed below.

The Shipping Gazette, in commenting upon this extraordinary case at the time, and speaking of the danger generally of rats on shipboard, said that "they have caused the foundering of many ships by gnawing holes in the planking or so eating away the inner sides of the wood as to leave very little for the straining of the hull to do in completing the aperture; they have been known to nibble through it, they will attack the bungs of casks and create leakage, find out the soft parts of the knees or lining, and make a passage for themselves from one part to another." So fully has the danger of this now come to be recognized that such contingencies are generally provided for in the insurance of wooden built ships.—Chambers Journal.

An Observing Baker.

During a war between Austria and Turkey a baker in his cellar kneading bread noticed a slight noise rising and falling at intervals, which seemed to come from a distant corner of his cellar. He stopped his work, and tracing the sounds discovered that they were caused by a few marbles dancing up and down on the head of a little drum his child had left there.

The majority of persons would have been satisfied to attribute the motion of the marbles to the rumbling in the street, or to the occasional firing of guns, but this man was an observer.

Surprised at the perfect regularity with which the marbles jumped from the drum head, he put his ear to the ground and noticed a distant tapping. He recalled how as a boy he had heard from one end of a long log a companion scratching with a pin upon the other end, and he judged that the earth was just such a conductor of sound as the log had been.

Suddenly it flashed upon him that what he heard was the sound of a pick, and that the Turks were doing what had so long been feared, undermining the city. The news was carried to the Austrian general, examination made, a counter mine prepared and exploded, and the Turks put to flight.—Youth's Companion.

Too Frank Expressions.

In an Irish daily there recently appeared this advertisement: "Wanted—A gentleman to undertake the sale of a patent medicine; the advertiser guarantees it will be profitable to the undertaker." This is even an unhappier mode of expression than that adopted in a local paper, when the editor "regretted to have to announce the death of Mr. So-and-so, but was not astonished to hear of the sad event, as deceased had been attended for some time by Dr. Smith.—Woman.

The Size of Great Britain.

Great Britain and Ireland have about the same number of square miles as Arizona—not so "great" after all. Madagascar is about as large as New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and North Carolina combined. The area of England proper and that of the state of Iowa are almost identical.—Philadelphia Press.

A Giant with Sixty Teeth.

The Cavalier Scrog, in his narrative of his journey to Fenecia, says that one of the burial caverns on the peak he found the head of a human being, supposed to have been a Gurch, as large as a bushel, the jaws containing exactly sixty teeth—thirty above and the same number below.—Million.
